DOUGLAS NEFF SIGNS TO JOIN WASHINGTON

Captain and Star of Virginia's Basefessionals.

Charlottesville, Va., May 9.—Douglas Neff, captain of the Virginia baseball team, and conceded to be the best shortstop in college baseball, certainly in the East, will be on the Nationals' roster after the commencement at the university about the middle of the newspapers for almost anything at the university about the middle of the newspapers for almost anything also newspapers. like aperthing else

Neff is a student in the engineering school, and will take his degree in Junc, as he is just as good a student as athlete. His idea is to pursue post graduate work at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology at the close of the American League season. Neff will go down to the capital early next week for a conference with Manager Griffith. When he takes up his restdence in Washington in mid June he will make his home with his brother. Neff is one of the best all-round men ever at Virginia. He jumped into the limelight when he made his debut on the college nine four years ago, and has played a consistent game ever since. His record the past season, though he was handicapped by being captain of the team, was a very flattering one. He led the squad with the stick, as well as in run-getting, capturing the prizes offered by the athletic association for the leader in these departments. He can play most any position in the infield or outfield, and is a twirler of no mean ability. His best showing in the box last season was at Princeton, when he proved a puzzle to the Tigers, Virginia winning by a triple of the price of the proved a puzzle to the Tigers, Virginia winning by a triple of the proved a puzzle to the Tigers, Virginia winning by a triple of the proved a puzzle to the Tigers, Virginia winning by a triple of the proved a puzzle to the Tigers, Virginia winning by a triple of the proved a puzzle to the Tigers, Virginia winning by a triple of the proved a puzzle to the Tigers, Virginia winning by a triple of the proved a puzzle to the Tigers, Virginia winning by a triple of the price of the proved a puzzle to the Tigers, Virginia winning by a triple of the price of the proved a puzzle to the Tigers, Virginia winning by a triple of the price of t the Tigers, Virginia winning by a good margin. MANY SIMILAR REPORTS
BUT THIS SOUNDS REAL.

There have been so many similar reports that the average layman, not versed in the ways of baseball magnates, will probably agree that it is another cry of wolf when there is no wolf. Buttruthfully and sincereily it looks real this time, or as real as any similar report can look. The Baltimore club, of the International League is not drawing enough money into the yard to pay street car fare

They may be having last a mild spurt, and they going a visit back into the ruck as the five vou into the yard to pay street car fare for the men. That much is fact. Jack realizes that the mosey-making hat he built up is falling to ag in returns. He is getting no action for the money he has expended. Actually, Dunn has the best club in the International League and probably the best club that has ever repre sented Baltimore in any league since the days of McGraw and Jennings, But even with such an attraction he is even with such an attraction he is not drawing.

There can be but one answer; the good people of Baltimore have welcomed the Federal League as the third major league, they are satisfied with the kind of baseball the new league is offering, they resent and have long resented the fact that Baltimore was not in one of the big leagues, but without other attraction, they were in much the same position of Richmond people, either had to accept what was given or do without. Given the opportunity to patronize opposition, they portunity to patronize opposition, they turned gladly to the opposition, and are giving it unqualified and whole-souled support. The result has been to wreck considerable wealth, to knock down with one blow an organization that required years in the building.

While we of Richmond will and do feel sorry for Dunn and his associates, we are ready to accord him a rousing welcome if he comes this way. Richmond, too, is dissatisfied. Richmond wants better baseball than the Virgina League can possibly offer, and Richmond feels that she is capable of supporting that better baseball. The abortive schedule adorted by the man nates took away from Richmond the week-end games, and thereby lessened week-end games, and thereby lessened the already lukewarm interest of the people in the local Virginia League club. By the same token, the mag-nates of the Virginia League weakened their organization, for no league is stronger than its weaker members, and the Virginia League now has several weaker, members.

The solution of the difficulty, say the The solution of the difficulty, say the men who are working to bring this new franchise to Richmond, will be to shift the Virginia League Richmond franchise to Lynchburg. This will give the Virginia League a compact circuit, far more compact than it is now. The magnates can reduce the salary limit, if necessary, and still give good class C baseball. The jumps between the Eastern clubs and Roanoke will be broken by having Lynchburg in between. Lynchburg should be ripe for baseball. The Hill City has not witnessed any real baseball for several years, and the people really want the game.

June.

Jack Ryan, who has coached the ball team at Virginia for the past three seasons, reached Charlottesville this afternoon and obtained the Orange and Blue leader's signature to a contract. The terms were not given out by either Ryan or Neff, but it was probably a contract for a single year with an option to renew.

While Neff has been very reticent about his plans, it was known all along that once he had made up his mind to enter the big show, he would cast his lot with the Washington club. When asked a month ago if he would consider a state of the university of the city from every viewpoint. REAL BURSTS OF SPEED

Unlike previous matches between big fellows, these two will show speed. Kervaras was slow and so impeded the work of Donnelly, who had to wait numbers of times for his man to come to him. He never lags, ed sixteens and first round consolance response to the camp of who have watched him. He never lags, never stops, but keeps boring in all of the time. Donnelly knows this, though he has never met Martin before. The Irishman usually pursues much the same tactics in his fights. Their styles are almost identical.

Their styles are almost identical.

Dr. Roller, who has battled with Martin, picked the big New Englander as the man for Donnelly to whilp before the Seattle physician would agree to give Donnelly a match. There must have been a reason. Roller has battled with Martin, and while the doctorwrestler was victorious, it took all of bis strength, all of his ability and all of his wit to accomplish the feat. He doubtless felt that if Donnelly could win from Martin he was worthy consideration. But Donnelly has not yet won, and as they say in Boston, there's many a slip between the mat and a fall.
